When dreams take flight

FLYING A HOVERCRAFT MADE OUT OF THERMOCOL OVER MUMBAI'S POWAI LAKE LED TO A COMPANY WHICH NOW HAS A 50% SHARE OF THE INDIAN DRONES MARKET

ANKIT MEHTA, CO-FOUNDER and CEO of ideaF-orge, gives all credit for his sucto IIT Bombay where cess to IIT Bombay where he studied for five years (inte-grated BTech and MTech in mechanical engineering). The institution gave him every-thing—the required expertise, friends, some of whom are co-thing—the required expertise, friends, some of whom are co-founders of the company, and seed capital formany of his early ventures. More importantly, it gave wings to his dreams.

Just after getting into IIT in 2000, Meht a who belongs to Jodhpur started converting his ideas into prototypes and projects. By the end of his course, he had done over 20 hardware projects and even filed a patent for one. He took an active part in IIT Bombay's innovation cell, which funded innovative ideas of students.

Rahul Singh, currently cofounder and VP of engineering, idea Forge, had approached him with an idea to make a hovercraft and fly it over Powai Lake, adjoining the IIT Bombay campus. Both built a few hovcampus. Both built a few hov-ercraft prototypes out of ther-mocol and within months, successfullyflewone. This was in a way the beginning of what is today called ideaForge. Mehta and Singh then reached out to Ashish Bhat, also Mehta and Singh then reached out Loshish Bhata, also a student at ITI Fombay, and now co-founder and VP R&D, idea-forge, who was an electronics wizard to help them buildit further. Once allother realised they were able to easily build something at 100 sec. Mehta graduated in 2005, but there was still one year to go for singh and Bhat to graduate and join him. So, in the meantime, he took up a consulting job in Pune for six months and used the money towork on the business. By then, Vipul Joshi, currently-o-founder and CFO, and a childhood friend of Mehta, also joined them: "Iwas very confident that we could convert our ideas into reality at will. I also realised that not to

"I got a grant from the "Technopreneur promotion programme" for the patent that I had filled when I was a that It had filed when I was a student. It was a handheld, student. It was a handheld, mechanically energy-generat-ing device that could charge mobile phones and electronics off-grid." The company was incubated at IIT Bombay and received its first seed capital from the college. Today, the firm counts institutional investors like Qualcomm Ven-tures and Infoysy as its back-ers, and has so far raised $40.37 million.

there is a team in India that could build the an inbat that could build the antipoliot technology from ground up. In 2008–09, they delivered the world's smallest and lightest autopliot to DIRDO, at haif the weight of a Guinness World record holder. Meanwhile, the chargers' business turned out to be a high-volume, low-mar-gin one and a slightly low-tech one too. So, the founders decided to drop that and take more autopilot technology-based projects. A few months later, the 2008 Mumbai terrorist attacks happened, which made them 2008 Mumbai terroris atracks happened, which made them understand the potential of drones further. They decided to build technology that could help our forces in such situations. In 2009, idealorge launched its first quadcopter drone and in 2010, it made its first stales. Since then, the company has been building drones for defence, internal security, disaster management, agriculture and industrial applications.

While the firm sources cer-tain components from outside India, its drones are designed, developed, and manufactured entirely in India, integrated with in-house built drone conwith in-house built drone con-trol software and solutions.
