Breakdown in Pakistan

It is India's biggest neighbour in South Asia. It has the world's seventh largest army. It regards its eastern neighbour as a permanent enemy, covets Kashmir and counts China as its closest friend and ally. But Pakistan is right now going through a crisis that has been likened as next only to its 1971 break up.

In challenging the Army chief, General Asim Munir, the former Prime Minister Imran Khan has emerged as the only politician since Zulfikar Ali Bhutto to shape the public imagination in such a way that cracks have begun to show along political lines even in Pakistan's most powerful "institution", described also as its permanent ruling party. All this at a time when its economy is teetering on collapse.

What does this mean for the country's seven-decade long struggle with nation-building and democracy? Who is Khan, and what politics does he represent, and how is he different from other political leaders who have taken on the Army before him? Is this just one more in Pakistan's never-ending cycle of crises? Or is this a turning point? If so, what might be the outcome? What does the chaos in South Asia's second biggest country which also has nuclear weapons, mean for the region and for India? Could it lead to a worsening or improvement in relations?

To discuss these and other questions, Express Explained's guest this time is T C A Raghavan, India's former High Commissioner to Pakistan, and the author of People Next Door, an acclaimed book on Pakistan.
